HONGKONS, JUNE 2ND, 1971 Ir there is one thing concerning which men and women fret and worry themselves unnecessarily all-over the world, but more word implies. It means the chair at public meetings: the right hand place at dinner more from habit than from any higher motive. 'And yet these small advantages have such prodigious attractions that men will sacrifice ease, comfort and health for their attainment, and that too, even in places where the highest positions attainable are only of very small account. "Two piecee man no can stop one place," was the reason which a Chinaman urged for running away from the walls of Canton, and allowing the argued for the plaintiffs by Mr. Hayllar. British troops to take up the position spirit does not seem to influence people with regard to the much less important useful lesson might be learned from the sage Colestial. The fine distinctions made between tion it is almost impossible to draw a line. might give way to a little sound sense, and are surely not worth a great deal of trouble. It is not contended that there are not or especially little places possessed of little should not be different positions in Society; all that is objected to is the tendency to make trifling distinctions of too great moment. This always arises in little places, governments, chiefly on account of the necessity of paying some special respect to those in official positions. A Judge is a judge, and a Governor a governor, though their spheres of labour may be limited; and it is a good good instincts this may carry people too far; and it does so when it causes all the vanities of the great world to be re-enacted in the very little world in which the lot of people is or America, social, political and official disor exercises an extended influence over ability or other qualifications; and the extent of the powers wielded by any official, impertant though they may be at times, are a mere nothing compared with those of the like officers at home. But habit goes a long way with most people; and the forms and ceremonies being the same, they are apt to imagine that they indicate the same claims as reality in the long run must tell over fiction. The generality of the public out here thus come to hold the position of men with importance; but not so the officials themselves, who fondly imagine they may claim the like deference from the community at large as is willingly given by the public to their prototypes at home. Nothing could in reality be more absurd. Despite all the Pies and alleged to come within the rule of artificial distinctions of Society, a man's position in the long run is in the main dependent upon his talents and his wealth. liable for money had and received to the use of P. If a man holds his position to depend upon little exceptional advantages, he will have cause enough to fret about slights every moment of his life; while the man who is above small vanities carries, so to say, his position with him. The rationale of the whole question is very plain. It is this, that whether a man stand high or low, lower than himself; and the consideration, so far as it is worthy of a thought, in which he will be held by both, will depend simply upon capecially in small places, it is concerning what he is really worth. > THE TIMES ON THE BUDGET. Mr. Disraeli recently characterised the financial statements of the present Administration as "harum-scarum" Budgets. Many who listened to the Chancellor of the Exchequer must have thought that the leader of the Opposition was inspired by the spirit of prophecy. Mr. Lowe had to meet a deficiency of 22,800,000 in the coming year. He had, moreover, to look forward to greater difficulties in the year 1872 3 It is already known that one source of revenue in 1872-3 must yield £870,000 less than is anticipated for 1871-2; that another item of revenue, amounting to £1,200,000, has been surrendered-so far, at least, as the Administration can pledge themselves to surrender it and that the cost of repaying the same received under the Parchase system will press upon 1872-3 more hardly by £600,000 than upon the next twelve months. The year beginning the first of next April is therefore 22,670,000 worse than the year just begun. It ought to be the first care of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to maintain that equality of pressure upon all plasses of taxpayers without which the barder of taxation would be intolerable. We cannot forget his illustration of the minute organisms found to exist under enurinous pressure at deepsen sunndings, simply because the pressure opon them is equal in all directions. Mr. Lowe seems to have lost sight of his own example. Having to provide £2,800,000 for the current year, with a certainty that, it will be required next year also, if, indeed, it be not found necessary to add to the demand, he su gents, that £2,250,000 should by raised by additions to the direct taxation of the country, and £550,000 by an addition to its indirect taxation. No one can pretend that there is any equality to be found in this distribution of the burden. Mr. Lowe proposes that the income-tax shall be ultered from 4d. in the pound to 2.2 per cent., or £2 4s. per £100, or a trifle over 51d. per pound, thus obtaining to bis estimate, £1,950.000; and he would raise the remaining £300,000 of the increase of direct taxation by changing the rate of Succession and Legacy Duty between parents. and children from I to'2 per cent. The sum of ever muy be said on behulf of this novel impost as a preventive against fire, it is a singularly reactionary proposal. The duty would much exceed 100 per cent. ad valoren, -it would probably by nearly 200 per cent., -and it must press at the outset with exampled severity on the makers of matches The cardinal vice of the Budget, apart. from minor faults, which might be removed without affecting its main outlines, is its injustice. Weak Administration may be excused for throwing upon the payers of direct taxes the onus of supporting all additions that may from time to time be found necessary in the public expenditure, but the present Government is sufficiently strong to be just. The addition of 1d. to the Income-tax and 2d. to the Ten Duty would have supplied all the wants, and such additions c. uld have been teken off again

The report of the directors was taken as read. The Chairman, in moving its adoption. remarked that the figures as regarded assets and liabilities, read, as usual, favourable for the position of the bank. The amount of cash, bullion, and Government securities were in On London .excess of what it stood at the last meeting, which was a favourable feature, as showing that the limbilities are fully covered. There was a falling off of £200,000 in the deposits. That under ordinary circumstances would be a subject of regret; but looking at the state of business for some time past, it was rather one of con- | ON NEW YORK gratulation. He had previously intimated the intention of reducing the interest on deposits, but inasmuch as a considerable portion of the money had been taken at a fixed rate of interest for fixed periods, the full effects of thechange would not be realised until the end of the present year. The same policy would be continned, and the reduction would follow thechange in value which money was undergoing throughout the world. Another cause of the year in regard to profit was the fall in the rate of egchange in India, in which respect; however, he hoped that before long there would be an improvement. At the last meeting he stated that he anticipated the last half would be better than the first baif of the year, and so it had proved, but not to the extent that was expected. The sum written off from the reserve to meet the had debts of former years it was found had been rather over-estimated at £110,270, and they had now added to it the estimated lose on the debte of the past year at Bombay and Calcutta, about £7,000, which, as compared with the profits of the year, was certainly not excessive, and contrasted favourably with other similar institutions. . > THE UNITED STATES NEGRO PROBLEM .-It seems premature to speculate on the ultimate destiny of the negro. I have bad the question put to me-" Did you ever so much as hear of any other fate attending an inferior race in the midst of a superior than one or other of these three-slavery, absorption, annihilation? The first is abolished; the second. is impossible; what have you but the third?" My opinion is, that the problem, as above stated, is as yet premature, because it has not been seen what freedom and education are to do in elevating the inferior race. Under any circumsta ces, however, even the most favourable, the future of the negro in the United States is a most difficult problem. And it may turn out that a separate state is the best solution,—a real negro settlement; not, however, a penal nettlement, compulsory upon all. When the brain-power of the negro is fully developed, and negro statesmen come to the front, they will probably be better able than any outsiders to settle these questions for themselves -'America and the Americans," in the Bunday

The scope of the work is so great, and its utilitarian purposes so complete, that a reforence to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Ohinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully, with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted.

(Figm "Xenophon." By Sir Alexander Grant, Perhaps the most famous episode which the look contains is the tale of Abracistee and Panthea. In one of Cyrus's battles with the Asayrians, the enemy's camp was stormed, and a lady of Sasa; the wife of Abridates, an Ausyrian prince, who was himself absent, having been ment on a mission to Bactris. The Median officers, in disposing of the booty, let seide this Indy as a complimentary offering to Cyrus. He. learning what had been arranged, requested Armspes, for whom he had had a sort of friend. ship from boyhood, to take charge of the lady. Armspes, on receiving the order, saked, "But have you seen the person whom you wish me to take charge of f." Cyrns replied that he had not. On which the other said, " I have seen her, though, and she is simply the most beautiful creature that was ever born of mortals throughout the whole of Asis. Even when she was sitting on the ground, covered with a veil, there was something about her that distinguished her from the other women. But, when she stood up, still veiled and weeping, she was not only divincly tail, but ounled by Messes. FLETOHER & Co. had an indescribable grace and tragic nobleness in berattitude To comfort her we told her. that no doubt ber husband was an excellent gentlemen, but that she would now belong to io in every respect was at least his equal. for that if there was a man in the world that deserved admiration, it was Cyrus, On hearing this she rent her veil, and uttered a lament-And we saw the greater part of her face and hands. There never was such a woman. You must go and see her yourself." "By heavens! I shall do nothing of the kind, if she is such as you describe," said Cyrus. "Why not?" saked the young man. "Why, because if I were now to yield to your description; and go and see ber, overwhelmed as I am with business, I darenty the sight of her fuight make me wish CHIPCHANDLERS, SAILMAKERS, to go again, and thus I might perhaps neglect | what I have to do, in order to sit gazing at her."
